BARRETT ASSET MANAGEMENT PRESENTS TO STUDENTS AND THE ADVISOR OF THE FUTURE

2018 International Conference “The Future of Work”

November 20, 2018—New York, NY—Barrett Asset Management, LLC presented at the 2018 International Conference hosted by Business Today. The three-day event brought students and financial industry executives together to examine “The Future of Work”—disruptions and their implications in the workforce. The goal of the non-profit organization run by Princeton University students is to close the communication gap between undergraduate college students around the world and industry executives through engaging conferences.

Peter Shriver, CFA, CEO of Barrett, said, “We are a multi-generational firm serving multi-generational wealth. ‘The Future of Work’ conference, and similar events, gave us the great opportunity to listen to—and learn from—a broad range of ideas, including those of the undergraduate students who are the future of our industry.”

Significant developments in technology, the changing structure of the global workforce, and the growing gig economy were foundational topics for this year’s event. The event was held November 18-20, 2018, at the Grand Hyatt-New York.

About Business Today

Business Today (“BT”) is a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization founded by Steve Forbes in 1968. For the past 50 years, our goal has been to bridge the gap between influential business leaders, from all industries, and top undergraduate students from across the world. BT creates a dynamic forum in which students from all backgrounds can be educated and inspired.
